the heights and depths of real pilgrimage--the kind done on foot. Bare feet got them a start, but soon the bad roads, travel through farmed fields, small accidents, and blisters, soon returned them to footwear. Bravo for them. Hence the title. With more reviews on this page, I'll finish by urging people to read their story and enjoy their honesty--not to leave out the warm hospitality of villagers who offered them food and rest. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Two very different men on a perilous journey By Mary Paige This is an amazing journey of two very different men as they travel through the Buddhist holy sites in India. Ajahn Sucitto is looking for the spiritual truths and Nick is searching for the beauty in the natural landscape. For those of us who love the writings of Ajahn Sucitto, it is fascinating to read of his patience and suffering on this painful journey. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Half raucous adventure and half inspirational memoir, Rude Awakenings documents an unusual pilgrimage. Two very different men--life-loving naturalist Nick Scott and austere Buddhist monk Ajahn Sucitto--together spend six months retracing the Buddha's footsteps through India. Told alternately by Sucitto and Scott in their distinctive voices, this story blends self-effacing humor, philosophical explorations, drama, travel observations, and the occasional giant fruit bat. Rude Awakenings is a heady record of survival and spirituality set against the dramatic backdrop of one of India's most lawless regions.

About the Author Ajahn Sucitto, a Theravadan Buddhist monk in the Thai forest tradition for twenty-eight years, is the Abbot of Chithurst Monastery in England. He is a popular teacher of meditation who conducts retreats around the world. Dr. Nick Scott is a botanist and ecologist who has worked most of his life in conversation. He lives in Chithurst, outside London. Stephen Batchelor has studied in Buddhist monasteries in India, Switzerland, and Korea. An accomplished writer and photographer, he has translated, written, and contributed to many books about Buddhism including Buddhism Without Beliefs, Verses from the Center, and The Tibet Guide. He lives in the South of France.
