Neil Levi, Michael Rothberg : The Holocaust: Theoretical Readings before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Holocaust: Theoretical Readings:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Excellent! By SoniaBrAll the authors one should read to really understand the Holocaust in just one book: I highly recommend it to all.

The first anthology to address the relationship between the events of the Nazi genocide and the intellectual concerns of contemporary literary and cultural theory in one substantial and indispensable volume. This agenda-setting reader brings together both classic and new writings to demonstrate how concerns arising from the Nazi genocide shaped contemporary literary and cultural theory. Wide in its thematic scope, it covers such vital questions as: - Authenticity and experience - Memory and trauma - Historiography and the philosophy of history - Fascism and Nazi anti-Semitism - Representation and identity formation - Race, gender, and genocide - Implications of the Holocaust for theories of the unconscious, ethics, politics, and aesthetics The readings, which are fully contextualized by a general introduction, section introductions, and bibliographical notes, represent the work of many influential writers and theorists, including Theodor Adorno, Giorgio Agamben, Hannah Arendt, Jean Baudrillard, Zygmunt Bauman, Walter Benjamin, Cathy Caruth, Jacques Derrida, Shoshana Felman, Saul Friedlander, Paul Gilroy, Lawrence Langer, Emmanuel Levinas, Primo Levi, Jean-Francois Lyotard, Hayden White, and James E. Young. This multidisciplinary anthology will be welcomed by students and scholars of the Holocaust.

"A truly excellent selection of responses to the Holocaust-exceptional in its ability to conjoin efforts at historical analysis with broader critical and theoretical issues." About the Author Neil Levi is an assistant professor of English at Drew University. Michael Rothberg is associate professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign and author of Traumatic Realism: The Demands of Holocaust Representation.
